LO: To use a range of conjunctions

Children in our World
REFUGEES AND MIGRANTS

Hanane Kai

Refugees and migrants are often so desperate that they risk their life and pay smugglers to transport them to another country. Some spend days hidden in a lorry without food or water. They have to keep very quiet and are scared that they might be found.
Others travel across rough seas in overcrowded boats. Many more walk for weeks in extreme weather conditions, without warm clothes, waterproofs, or anywhere to sleep. Sadly, some don't survive the dangerous journey. It's important that we find ways to help so that they won't have to put themselves in danger.

Refugees and migrants want to live in a country where they feel safe.
Just like everyone else, they dream of a warm, comfortable home, to take care of their family, get a job or go to school. Only then will they be able to do the everyday things that we take for granted, such as buying their favourite foods, watching television and having fun with friends.

I do

I'm going to use a coordinating conjunction. I am going to use the conjunction 'but'. It is a FANBOYS so I know it is coordinating. I know that coordinating conjunctions go in the middle of a sentence so I need to make sure I do this. A sentence with a coordinating conjunction joins two simple sentences which makes a compound sentence. I have two simple sentences to join using the coordinating conjunction 'but'.

My simple sentences are: 'Some refugees are children who travel with a parent' and

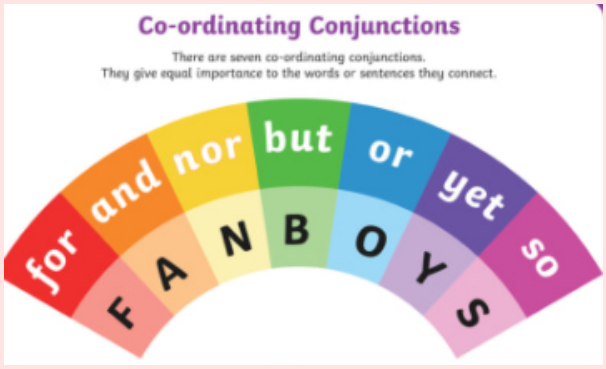

'every year tens of thousands of children make long journeys without a grown up.'

I need to join them with the conjunction 'but' and the comma in the correct place.

We do

Write a sentence about the text together using the conjunction 'but'.

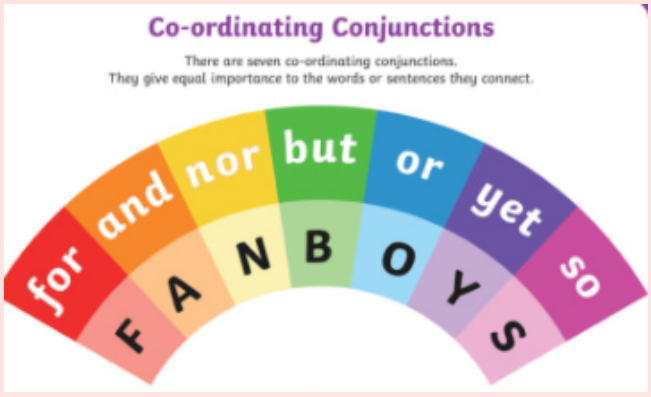

Use the FANBOYS conjunctions to write different sentences about the text.

You do

Write a sentence in your book using the conjunction 'but'.

Use the FANBOYS conjunctions to write different sentences about the text.

I do

I'm going to use a subordinating conjunction. I am going to use the conjunction 'although'. It is not a FANBOYS so I know it is subordinating. I know that subordinating conjunctions can go in the middle or at the beginning of a sentence. A sentence with a subordinating conjunction joins a main clause and a subordinating clause to make a complex sentence. The comma goes in the middle of these two clauses.

I have a main clause:

Refugees can often go on to lead long and happy lives.

I have a subordinating clause:

Refugees have come from a difficult situation.

I will join the main clause to the subordinate clause with the conjunction 'although'

Refugees can go on to lead long and happy lives although they have come from a difficult situation.

Notice how I changed the noun to a pronoun. I will put the comma after the main clause.

Now I am going to start the sentence with the subordinate clause and the conjunction.

Although refugees have come from a difficult situation, they often go on to lead long and happy lives.

Notice how I changed the noun to a pronoun.

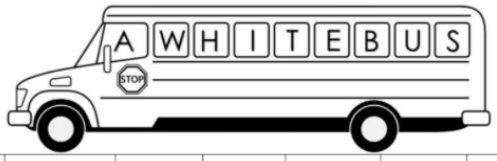

I put the comma after the subordinate clause to split the clauses.

Use the conjunction in the middle of the sentence and then at the beginning.

Use some different subordinating conjunctions to write some sentences about the text.
