Look at the example below.

Seb, who at this point had 1023 followers on Instagram, decided to post what they had created and tagged his Uncle's company into it. Within 2 hours, his post had gone viral with everyone from footballers to TV presenters to David Attenborough sharing it worldwide. Seb couldn't believe it, a meeting with the manufacturers was booked in for the following week!

After an anxious 2 day wait, Eddie called Seb. "They love it! It's cheap to make and can be produced using the equipment we already have. Seb, you've done it! They want to patent the idea and begin large scale production immediately – they already have orders from Evian water, Aveeno and Pepsi!

Seb was speechless. Then the messages started to come. When he posted his biodegradable bottle, he had posted a photo of the beach at the same time. Now his followers (all 879,023 of them) were tagging him in videos and images of people at the beach, clearing the rubbish and restoring the natural beauty. And it wasn't just Golden Cove, groups of people from all over the world were heading to their local beaches and cleaning them up!
