I'm big enough to save our trees...
Felix, from Germany, was concerned about the vast numbers of trees being cut down all over the world. When he was nine years old, he launched Plant for the Planet to get schoolchildren all around the world to join together and plant new trees in their own countries. His idea was so successful that a few years later, over a million trees had been planted in nearly one hundred different countries.
A huge number of trees are cut down around the world every day.
Trees are cut to make for farmland, housing harvesting wood

I do

Felix adds the last bits of soil around a tree he's just planted
