L.O: To identify the rhyming pattern in a poem.

Read the poem again for the third time.

Do you notice any rhyming patterns?

As you read, identify the rhyming couplets. I do

It winds along the face of a cliff
This path which I long to explore,
And over it dashes a waterfall,
And the air is full of the roar
And the thunderous voice of waters which sweep
In a silver torrent over some steep.

In pairs, identify any rhyming couplets in the second stanza.

We do

It clears the path with a mighty bound
And tumbles below and away,
And the trees and the bushes which grow in the rocks
Are wet with its jewelled spray;
The air is misty and heavy with sound,
And small, wet wildflowers star the ground.

Identify the rhyming couplets in the rest of the poem.

Finished? Pick a stanza and with your partner, learn it off by heart.
