So, you want to hear a story? I know a lot of stories (mostly good ones), some are from the past and some from the future. Today, I will tell you a story from the past, because if we don't know where we are coming from, we will not know where we are going.

In this story, I am going to show you how it was to live during the Greek Golden Age but to see that you will need to travel back in time (2,350 years to be exact). Long before the Victorians, Henry the 8th, even before the start of Islam or Christianity. Now, travel south east to Europe past France and Italy, till you get to Greece. You made it! You are now in Ancient Greece, in the city of Athens. A city that has over a million people, is at the heart of civilization and the most modern city in the world. They were making great advancements in art, philosophy, architecture and literature and the whole world was envious of their achievement.

Leo worked at the king's palace. He was responsible for cleaning and maintaining the guest rooms that were located near the king's chamber. His king was a very kind, wise leader who greatly admired scholars and inventors. Often, he would organise galas and invite scholars from all over Greece to identify the best minds. During one such event, Leo overheard the king asking the scholars a riddle,

"What goes on four feet in the morning, two feet at noon, and three feet in the evening?"

Suddenly, there was a silence in the room. No one said a word. None of the scholars knew the answer. Then there were whispers, "what is this creature?", "Have you ever heard of this creature?", "This is no ordinary creature", "Sounds like a creature of the gods!"

Disappointed, the king extended the challenge to the scholars and proclaimed,

"Whoever will find the answer to my riddle, I will award them 1001 gold coins and grant them one wish."
