LO: To use inverted commas to write speech in a story.

Recap: When do we use inverted commas?

King Arthur was delighted when his wife Guinevere brought him the round table as a present. He jumped with joy and shouted, "Wow! A round table! I love it!"

"You're very welcome!" Guinevere replied with a smile.

Here is a paragraph written without inverted commas.

Where should the inverted commas go?

Lancelot placed his hand on the injured soldier and a bright light shone against the skin. The injured man sat up, smiling. Wow! Guinevere whispered under her breath. Thank you so much! The injured man gushed. Lancelot bowed and replied You're very welcome.

Recap: When do we use inverted commas?

On friday, you created characters. You created a hero and a villian. Then you thought about things they might say.
Thinking about those characters, can you write a conversation between the two characters, using inverted commas?

I do:
