It's good to care about other people, but it can be upsetting to think about what life is like for refugees and migrants. If you are sad or worried, it is important to talk to an adult about how you feel. Together, you can think about ways that you can help.

Remember, most people have a safe and comfortable home to live in. You and your family are not at great risk of becoming refugees or migrants. There are lots of clever people working hard to stop wars and terrorism, and end poverty all around the world. They want to make sure that everyone can live happily.

Lots of people are already helping refugees and migrants, but there are many ways that you can help, too. You could collect food, clothes, toys or books to send to refugee camps. You could organise a bake sale or take part in a sponsored challenge to raise money for charities that help refugees. You could even write a letter to the government asking them to do more to look after people in need.

I do

I'm going to write a sentence of three for action/description. I'm going to have three parts to the sentence to describe the action:

1. I left my home behind
2. travelled to a new country on our own
3. found somewhere new to live.

I need to put a comma in between two of the parts and use and to join the last two parts of the sentence

We do

Write sentences of three for action/description in first person from the point of view of a child who is a refugee.

I ran away, I found a new country and a beautiful place to stay.
I had to leave my precious home behind to stay safe, I travelled to a new country and I found a new home.
We had to leave our home, there was a war happening and luckily we a found a new home.
The country I live in is dangerous, I have nowhere to sleep and have no other clothes to wear.
I left my home to live in Russia, I feel unsafe because a war is going on and I am very miserable.
