Because the drum is vibrating, it will cause the small particles in the gases around it to also vibrate. Therefore, they will travel through the air as sound waves until they reach the ear. Furthermore, sound can travel through solids, liquids and gases. In the ear, the eardrum vibrates before sending the vibrations to three tiny bones in the ear. What a remarkable ear it is!

Now you know how sound travels you will be able to impress your teacher or your friends with your fascinating knowledge about sound.
