LO: To write a poem

You are going to write a similar poem but change the mouse to a rat who is trying to escape from the pied piper.

We thought of actions so we could perform the poem, The Pied Piper of Hamelin.

I do

Upon a time, as Aesop could report,
A fat rat came to a stream;
She might not paddle, her feet too tiny
She could not float, she had no buoyancy

And to and fro beside that stream
She ran, weeping with many piteous peep.

We do

Upon a time, as Aesop could report,
A tiny rat came to a lake;
She might not swim, her arms were too short
She could not float, she had no boat

And to and fro beside that lake bursting with tears
She ran, _____ with many piteous peep.

You do

Upon a time, as Aesop could report,
A _____ rat came to a _____;
She might not _____, her _____;
She could not _____, she had no _____:
And to and fro beside that _____
She ran, _____ with many piteous peep.
